EAST HALL, 1919

Founded In 1887, Pratt Institute was the vision and eventual creation of Charles Pratt. By being unsatisfied by other the programs of mainstream institutes around the country he set out to create a place of learning that would teach its students practical skills that would become easily applied to the workplace of the time period. As traditional degrees were viewed as incomplete by its founder, offering only teaching in the liberal arts Pratt Institute was molded as learning center for both the mental and physical. Charles Pratt believed in a solid education in the liberal arts, but had noticed that the apprenticeship system had faded out of existence. With this in mind, a machine shop building consisting of a metal working and wood working forge and foundry. Based upon its early layout as an industrial school, there has long existed a myth that the institute was originally intended to become a shoe factory if the institute failed as a place of learning.

Pratt's opening was marked by a drawing class of 14 students held October 17, 1887. As Pratt was loosely intended as a vocational school, diplomas were not actually granted until the late 1930's. During the period between the first and second world wars, there became a much greater need for specialized education in the work force. Observing this growing need, Pratt began awarding four year bachelor degrees in 1938. Early teachings involving the foundry, building trades, and industrial art evolved into the areas of sculpture, architecture, and communication design respectively.

BEST KIDDER IN TOWN

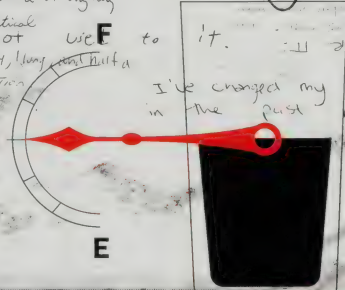

FOR THE WORST

I've matured ^{GOING TO BED AT 3 IN THE MORNING IS NOT SO BAD.} ever so nicely ^{Like a wine.}

Stayed I the same ^{I am NOT the same person}

^{I've lost my sweet, sweet innocence...} ^{I think the only thing that's changed about me is that I'm} ^{J. Her taller. I really can't think of anything}

^{Pratt forced me to be a greedy, manipulative and existential} ^{lost} ^{live} ^{to make up the cost of tuition}

^{I've changed my mind in the past} ^{clothes approximately 750 times} ^{days.} ^{Seann} ^{All hair} ^{except my hair has been changed} ^{in different colors + different lengths}

Our experiences here at Pratt are as varied and diverse as the melting pot we live in. Some good, some bad, and some ugly, it all depends on your perspective of it all. Was your Pratt experience half full or half empty?
